SAMPLE PICTURE DESCRIPTIONS (PHOTOS FOUND IN APPENDIX 3)

1.

In the first of these two photos I can see a young couple who are probably looking forward to their wedding ceremony and the party which will follow. The bride is wearing a beautiful white wedding dress and the bridegroom is wearing an elegant black dinner jacket, which – as I can see from the photo – is the traditional, so-called 'Bocskai style' wear named after the Hungarian Prince, Bocskai István, and in the 20th century this distinctive style became part of a clothing trend for men associated with the sense of strong national identity and patriotism.

Taking photos before a wedding ceremony is a necessary part of this special day. At some point after the wedding, the newlyweds can then put the pictures of these memorable moments into their carefully chosen, decorative photo albums.

In the second photo the same couple have already arrived at their church ceremony and they're probably taking their wedding vows before the altar. They seem very serious, which is normal on such a magnificent occasion, when a man and a woman proclaim their commitment for a life-long relationship in the eyes of the Church and in the presence of several other people. Besides the usual wedding ceremony which people have at their local registry-office, a lot of people also have a church ceremony on their wedding day. If a couple would in fact like a church wedding, they need to meet certain conditions and attend preparation classes before the ceremony. Unfortunately, nowadays a church wedding is not a guarantee for a safe and lasting marriage; there're more and more couples whose marriages end up in divorce or separation.
